A man and wife who were Soldiers of Halifax No. 1. Corps in the early days of the Armistice recently sought salvation in Windsor, N.S., and have taken their stand in the Corps. The week-end meeting was conducted by our D. C., Mr. Barr. His concertina playing, singing, and soul-stirring addresses were much enjoyed. Last night a good crowd was present and one young man surrendered and is making good progress.

following Sabbath his wife got saved. Capt. Pitcher and Lieut. Martin are our C. O.'s.

A Glimpse of Ceylon.

[From the Illustrated London News.]

HAD left Kandy by train at seven o'clock had been heavy rain one morning. During the night, and the nuts were hidden under rolling clouds of mist. Here and there beside the railway appeared the warm-coloured huts of a village, with all its choate inhabitants squatting outside to watch the daily working of the Paddy fields.

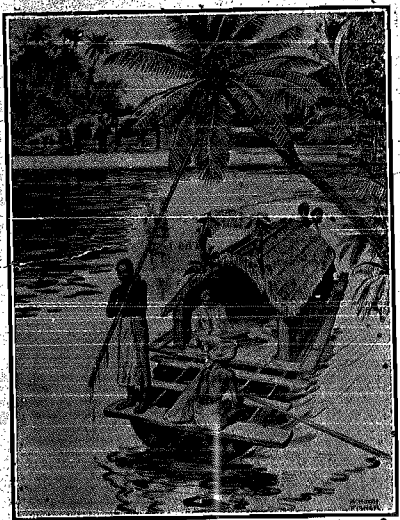

A few hours brought me to Kelawake, the heart of Ceylon tea-growing, the rows of little houses rising in a hill with lines, straight, thin lines of shadow on the red, bare earth. I drove to the east out to Hakgalla, the botanical garden. The meaner temperatures there is 50 to 60, and although the gardens are about 200 feet high, only twice during the past twenty-five years has frost been recorded. About Hakgalla there is good hunting with plenty of sambur (called elk by the English there). Shooting of sambur is now prohibited, and it is hunted with dogs and knives. This not only helps to preserve the game, but gives Europeans a better chance, as the natives cannot usually afford to keep dogs. A few days previously the curator had shot a pair of leopards, one of which had killed a cow in a neighbouring village. The "kill" was left, and when the leopard returned to it, the animal was ready to kill. The same night the she-leopard came to feed upon the cow. It seems that the male and female never feed together, but the she-leopard was what her lord and master chooses to leave her.

Looking east from Hakgalla, the Uva Province, the hills are quite bare of jungle and covered with the coarse grass of what is called paddy country. It is very dry, and the grass is kept for a short time every year after the natives have burnt it off, when the young grass is distinct. Over this paddy are the hills, like a plain I could see in the distance, Dyalawale and the camp, where the Boer prisoners were kept, now used for the Ceylon Army and Navy Volunteers. One old Boer, who refused to take the oath of allegiance, was still living. Over this paddy are the hills, a mile per month from the Treasury, and as he was of course, a good shot, he spent his time in hunting and adding to his income by selling skins.

Just after dawn next morning I started out to walk through the hills to visit a village of the natives, becoming intimately acquainted on the way with the peculiarities of Ceylon leeches. The natives are so close together in the forest, and just when you think you are far from any sign of man, but the path you are treading, someone upon whose village you are like the country of a fairy tale, only the thatched huts are made of wattle and daub instead of mud and brick, and you do not know whether the chocolate people are witches or not, though most of them are very ugly. After dark, the night at Balapana, a small town on the Kola Ganga (the Black River) on a native boat. Swiftly we glided hour after hour through that wild garden of tropical luxuriance. Here large clumps of giant bamboos drooped their feathery foliage over the water, where a temple appeared upon a wall of rock, below which a priest was bathing in the river, while his yellow robe, left to float on the sand, gleamed in the sunlight like burning topaz. Water-buffaloes, deep in the stream, just showed their backs and noses above water, and elephants, more sportive, indulged in comical gambols. And I also, accepting this general order of the bath, dived into the Kola Ganga and tried my strength against the powerful current.

Less than half-way to the son, up among the hills on the south side of the river, an English syndicate is working a plumbago mine with first-class machinery and expert engineers. I stopped to look on the top of the hill, a small wooden box three little white lamps are always kept burning, and light for the company, and one for the miners.

Adjutant Carler reports that in the middle of the river, were conducted in the Winnipic Provincial Jail during the month of August a total of eleven men pronounced sane. [Think good. —Ed.] Juniors' work growing. The Mayor, ministers, and citizens are interesting themselves in our work.

ROYAL CITY'S NEWS.
At Guelph great interest is being taken in the Patriotic Meetings on Sunday afternoons. Last Sunday over $21.00 was given in a few minutes at Exhibition Park, no special being present, and just the ordinary meeting being held. Rev. Mr. Harris was called on at the close of the service, and was very feeble and a little older in years than was our late beloved General, he was happy to have a word, and wished The Army every blessing.

Brigadier Rawling and Staff-Captain Walton conducted a recent week-end at Sherbrooke, it being the Memorial Sunday. The Brigadier spoke to The General in all of the meetings, which were well attended. During the whole of the week we held open-air meetings every night, and attracted hundreds of people, this being our Exhibition week. The PERSONALITIES.

All readers of the War Cry will be interested to learn that quite a number of well-known Officers are under farewell orders. Included in the number are Staff-Captain Bloss of the Men's Staff Department at T. H. Q., Staff-Captain Sims of the Salvage Department, Toronto, Staff-Captain Macdonald of Winnipeg, Staff-Captain Pascoe, Private Secretary to Colonel Mapp, Adjutant Mellor of Quebec, Adj. Shearer of Ottawa, and Ensign Habkirk of the Hamilton Metropole. The farewells in the Women's Staff Department include Staff-Captain Holman of St. John, Staff-Captain Broster and Adjutant Dunster, who have temporarily had charge of Rosedale Lodge, Toronto, Adj. Ellery of Vancouver, and Ensign Virtue of Halifax. We shall have more to say regarding these comrades next week.

Captain Hal Beckett and Lieut. Milton, of Huntsville, had a thrilling experience the other night after they had conducted a meeting at Burk's Palls. They got sleeping accommodation with a young man, who during the night rushed into their room, yelling like a maniac. He attacked the two young men and threatened to strangle them, but at last the Captain, with the assistance of two other men whom he called into the house, overcame him, and the two Officers spent the rest of the night in the Army Hall, returning to Huntsville next morning. They had a narrow escape.

The Property Department staff are ever on the wing. Last week Lieut.-Colonel and Mrs. Turner were specialising at Guelph; Major and Mrs. Miller were doing the Harvest Festival services at Clinton, visiting Stratford and Woodstock on the return journey in the intervals of the department; while Ensign Silt was at Hamilton and Dundas on Saturday, assisting in the night meeting at Dovercourt on Sunday.

Among the visitors to T. H. Q. during the week were Brigadier Rawling and Adjutant Thompson from Montreal, and Lieutenant Gardner of Grace Hospital, Winnipeg, who has been on furlough.

Captain Macdonald is far-wellcoming from Brampton, and Captain Howard Hood has been appointed to take charge of the Corps.

Captain Tvangeline Daniels has been re-accepted for service as an Officer in Canada, and has been appointed to take charge of New Liskard.

Captain Mabel Howard, of Winnipeg, has been appointed to assist in the Correspondence Department at T. H. Q.

Ensign Backus has been appointed, not to manager of the Metropole in Montreal, under Major Bay.

Captain Sydney Cooke, of Burlington, Iowa, U.S.A., wishes to exchange an American Cry and Young Soldier's Cry for an issue. Who will take him up?

PERSONAL INTELLIGENCE.

The General and Mrs. Booth, although naturally feeling the strain of the past few weeks, are well; and, thrusting aside their own feelings of grief, have addressed large gatherings in Glasgow, Manchester, and Liverpool. They also conducted an all-night of prayer and praise at the Clapton Congress Hall.

We learn that Commissioner Lawley will accompany The General on his campaigns.

Commissioner Ogrim, of Sweden, recently conducted at Helsingfors the installation of Lieut. Colonel Jarsson, the new Territorial Commander for Finland. At Stockholm he led the welcome meetings of Colonel Howard Sweden's new Chief Secretary.

Colonel Pearce is conducting the West Indian Annual Congress at Kingston. On his way back he will visit Colon (Panama), Trinidad, and Barbados.

Lieut.-Colonel De Groot, the newly-appointed Territorial Commander for the Dutch Indies, has, with Mrs. De Groot, arrived safely at Semarang. Almost immediately on his arrival the Colonel had a very satisfactory interview with the Governor-General (Mr. Idenburg). His welcome meetings were conducted by Colonel Bates at Semarang.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Three large gatherings were recently addressed by Commissioner Higgins in the Municipal Hall, Dundee. A large number of representative citizens were on the platform at the afternoon Citizens' Meeting. Thirty-six souls knelt at the mercy-seat in the night meeting. The International Staff Band has been the Musical School of late-Edinburgh and Glasgow being visited. One of the anticipated fruits of this campaign is that our friends in Dundee will take great forward strides in the near future.

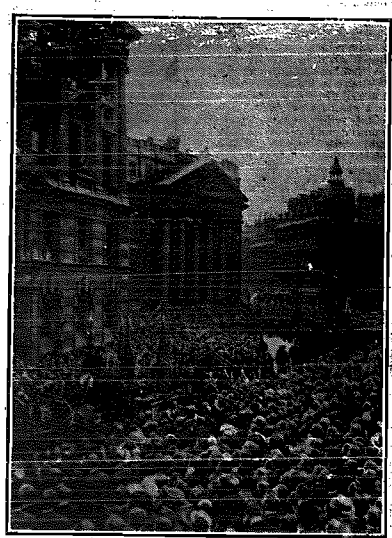

At Clydebank the Band played to 1000 work people belonging to the Singer Sewing Machine Factory, and to 3000 at John Brown's Shipbuilding Yards.

A short sketch of the life of our late beloved General is in course of preparation, and will, we hope, be issued from the press within the next few weeks. Commissioner Hailton, who has been entrusted with the work, has almost completed the MS.

IMPRESSIVE MEMORIAL SERVICES.

In the presence of great audiences at Glasgow and Manchester leading citizens, paid unstinted tribute to the late General. Addresses were given by the General Bramwell and Mrs. Booth. Lord Provost Stevenson presided over the Glasgow meeting, and the Lord Mayor of Manchester performed the same service in that city. Among the speakers at the Manchester meeting were Sir John Collier (President-elect of the Wesleyan Conference), Sir Thos. Shann (Chairman of the Education Committee), and the Mayor of Salford.

It was a thrilling moment when Mrs. Booth rose to speak, and one which must have inspired itself in the heart and memory of our new Leaders. They were visibly moved by the loud and long acclamations that followed—many tokens and pledges of devotion and fidelity on the part of the Salvationists present, and of the confidence of the Lancashire public.

The General, who on rising was greeted with further demonstrations of sympathy and affection, said he had been deeply touched by all he had seen and heard that night. The task before him was a mammoth one, but knowledge of their confidence and assurance of the continued kindness of The Army's friends, were sources of strength and comfort to him. He spoke of the single-heartedness, the sincerity, and the simplicity of the late General, qualities which he urged all present to make their own to the greater success than ever before. His address, which was eagerly listened to, and which repeatedly evoked applause, closed with a call to every Salvationist to reconvert their powers so that—as with their glorified Leader—witness to the Lord may be the dominant passion of their lives. It was truly a great and memorable gathering.

GENERAL'S PLAN FOR WIDOWS AND ORPHANS.

In an interview with some London newspaper men recently, the General expressed his desire to ameliorate the hard lot of widows and orphans—something practical to aid the poor, one which must have inspired itself in the heart and memory of brighten both their and the children's lot. After speaking of the general service of The Army's Social Work, he continued: "I think we ought also to make a special effort for the fatherless children and widows. Thousands of women with children are widowed every year, to whom the workhouse is as great a horror as it would be to your widow or mine. They clean, oil, or cook for somebody in chambers, and at night they do mangle and sewing to try and keep the children decent. Then one of two things happens. Either they sink down under the strain of it, and go to the hospital, die in a few days, heart, while the children go into the workhouse after all, or they live to be just old enough to see the children go out into the world and then creep away to die. I think that a monstrous thing in a civilised nation. And now, these women are not drunkards, their husbands were not scoundrels. I hope to do something for these widows, and as for their children, I think the nation has a very grave responsibility."

SOUTH AFRICA.

At the concluding meeting of the Native Congress in Johannesburg, Commissioner Radie announced that arrangements had been made for the schooling of the children belonging to Native Officers. It was felt that such a provision, while meeting a much felt need, would likely grow to be a financial burden, and that it was a project of the same kind all. The last few days of the Congress were overclouded by a series of untoward happenings. On the Tuesday Mrs. Radie fell from her horse in the city, and on leaving the Settlement to Mr. Envoys Mampumulo's kraal, happened that a branch of a tree, falling at the time, or Mrs. Radie's injuries might have been more grave, but as it is the shock to the nervous system, and the bruises sustained by the fall, have told on Mrs. Radie somewhat seriously.

The day following there was a cry "Fire, fire!" and sweeping up the hill-side came a mighty wave of flame, burning up trees and grass, and sweeping through the sugar-cane plantation with terrible force. The Settlement house, hall, and tents were threatened, but with many helpers armed with sacks and axes, and water the flames were beaten back in another direction, and, thank God, we escaped.

And the next day, the Death Angel came under tragic circumstances and laid to rest in a quiet corner of the Catherine Booth Settlement, by the flowing waters of the Amatikulu River in Zululand, are the mortal remains of Lizzie, the only daughter of Staff-Captain and Mrs. Hendy.

AUSTRALIA.

The Territorial Social Annual Meeting was recently conducted in the Melbourne Town Hall by Commissioner and Mrs. Hay. A feature of the street procession which preceded the meeting was the tableaux mounted on floats, each of which represented some branch of Army Social operations. There was the reclamation of a Prison Girl, a Boy's case, (1) being tempted; (2) convicted and sent to the P. O. B.; (3) his victory; and (4) saved and reinstated in his former employment. Another scene depicted little girls asleep in an Army Home, while a guardian angel kept watch over them. Still another represented a busy nursing scene.

The Premier of Victoria and the Federal Attorney-General were present in the Town Hall, and spoke very highly of the Army's work.

Commissioner and Mrs. Commissioner gave the latest statistical information regarding The Army's manifold social operations, and concluded in his formal statement of reclamation.

REVENUEABLE CITY.

Ridgely and Mrs. J. H. B. Harvey, Festival Sunday, Adjutant and Mrs. Byers led on. At night four candidates, having elected to leave the world, were a result the Band led the help of two comrades—Bandmen Sydney Bolton and Alfred Hildesheim, and Mrs. Byers, who, rowfully, gives up two places which have been faithful workers—Sisters Crouch and Bibby. As the prayer meeting, and the candidates voluntarily walked out to the mercy-seat, to themselves more fully to be dedicated to God, and their lives to the service of the world.
